

Teen Connections Book Group

Teens:

Have an adult in your life you like to talk books with?

Adults:

Have an teen in your life with excellent taste in books?

Teen Connections Book Group:

Teen Connections Book Group is an intergenerational group hosted by librarians Jill Hayes & Jennifer MacMillan at the Harvard Public Library.

You may be familiar with the model of a Mother-Daughter Book Group. Teen Connections is a similar idea- but seeks to expand the definition to include any positive teen/adult relationship.

Teens if you have a parent, grandparent, aunt, uncle, or family friend you like to talk books with- invite them to join the group with you!

(Please see the back of this flyer for more information)

How Teen Connections Works:

Each month, members of Teen Connections will choose a teen novel or an adult novel that has been recommended for teens.

Everyone will read the book. Adult/teen pairs are encouraged to talk about the book as they read.

Once a month, the group will meet to discuss the book, virtually or in person

Teen Connections is intended for students in grades 7-12, and the adults in their lives.
